MOTORISTS AWE PUBLIC BY THEIR INDIFFERENCE

House Moved on Foundation; Port Matilda Man Hurt.

MINOR AUTO ACCIDENTS

Motorists—indifferent to the rights of others, with no respect for white lines, curves or danger spots and even reckless in the extreme--are creating public impression that is very unfavorable. Frequently, persons are heard to remark, "Is there any place where one is safe from the automobile?" The majority of motorists respect the rights of others and would welcome the policing of the highways, about which so much has been heard, so that those few that are proving reckless might be caught and kept from using the roads.

A young man from Port Matilda—James Gray—was cut and bruised, as well as two companions—Cloyd Thompson, of Philipsburg, and Miss Frances Gross, of WarriorsMark—when a touring car in which they were returning from a dance at the Midway, early last Thursday morning was turned into a cross street at the foot of an incline in Chester Hill and a car following it, crashed into the auto, pushing them both into a corner house. The house was jolted from the foundation by the impact and it will require $2,000 to put it in proper shape again. This section of highway seems particularly dangerous as seven persons have been killed and many seriously injured since it was opened to traffic about eighteen months ago, although it is only a few miles in length.

An Oakland touring car and a Buick sedan, from Altoona, were damaged slightly, the sedan losing a front wheel, when the cars crashed on Sunday afternoon at the cross roads at Pleasant Gap. Repairs were promptly made by the Pleasant Gap garage but names of the drivers were not secured.

Two Fords, a coupe and a roadster, were damaged in a collision along the highway at Rockview on Saturday night but none of the occupants was injured. The cars were towed to a State College garage for repairs.

Two Ford touring cars overturned when they sideswiped while attempting to pass on the state road at McCoy's Works on Sunday evening. The cars were from Coleville; occupied by Edward King and family and the McMurtrie family. Fortunately, the cars were not badly damaged and the occupants escaped serious injury.

HARVEST QUEEN CONTEST

Feature of Hallowe'en Opened Yesterday at Elks.

Voting for the most popular girl to act as Harvest Queen on Hallowe'en opened yesterday morning and from indications there will be keen but pleasant rivalry with every day bringing surprises until the contest closes at 10 o'clock P. M. on October 30.

The parade, in charge of Capt. William H. Brown, will form at 7:30 P. M. on Hallowe'en and all organizations who plan to be in line in a body, as well as individuals who will enter floats, are requested to notify Captain Brown on or before Saturday, October 27, so that a proper place may be assigned them.

Lovers of good dancing will be pleased to learn that Achenbach's Famous Nine, of State College, has been engaged for the Charity Ball to be given in the Armory. This assures the very best of music.

Thefts Reported.

Petty thefts, but daring, have been frequently reported the past week or longer, by persons parking their cars in town. Just the other evening, a car that had been parked on Spring St., near High, was virtually stripped of extras and the seat cushions were found lying in the street when the motorists returned to the car. Stealing of thermos bottles and small articles from back porches, has also been reported. It is understood the police are on the lookout and expect to make arrests if they can come upon any thieves while they are at work.

A Musical Treat.

The preparation for rendering "The Spring of Ruth" in the Garman Opera House on Monday and Tuesday nights of next week are fully completed and a splendid presentation is now assured. Those who attend the rehearsals say the music is something wonderful and the seats are selling rapidly, indicating a crowded house for both nights. The Penn State mandolin club will play between acts. The chart will open at Green's drug store on Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

BANK APPEAL DENIED

Supreme Court Refuses Petition to Consider Centre Co. Case.

The United States Supreme Court has refused permission to George R. Meek, Mrs. Florence Dale and Andrew Breeze to appeal for a review by that body of the decisions of the federal circuit and district courts in the Centre County Bank matter. The petition to the Supreme Court was formally presented on Monday. Shortly thereafter announcement was made of the refusal.

As a result of the foregoing action, the bank matter reverts to the federal district court, presided over by Judge Witmer. The way is now cleared for a decision by him on a petition to declare the Centre County Bank, John M. Shugert and Mrs. Mary Harris bankrupts. It is expected that such a decision will be handed down in the near future. Depositors will thereupon immediately ask for the appointment of a trustee in bankruptcy. Adjudication of depositors' bank accounts will follow, and the trustee will proceed to determine by legal process who, in addition to Mr. Shugert and Mrs. Harris, as partners in the bank are liable for the bank's shortage.

Once the bankruptcy hearings are begun, it is expected that the public will learn the inside story of the management of the defunct bank, who were responsible, directly or indirectly, and who were aware of what was going on during the several years immediately preceding the closing of the institution's doors. It is known in a general way that for quite a while before it failed the bank earned no profits but paid salaries regularly during this time to the several officers and employes. How this was done, by whom, and who all were aware of the illegal practice, is but one of the numerous interesting revelations expected to come to the surface when witnesses are placed on the stand at the bankruptcy hearings. These hearings will be open to the public, and any depositor will be privileged to interrogate witnesses.

BURNED CROSS

State College Residents Alarmed and Call Out Fire Company.

History repeated itself in Centre County for a certainty on last Friday evening when firemen at State College were called out as the cross of the Ku Klux Klan was burned on the campus. The residents of Bellefonte recently did the same thing.

Incidentally, the burning of the cross at State College is looked at as a joke perpetrated by the students of Penn State. In Bellefonte, the burning of the cross was attributed without question to the Ku Klux Klan. There are Klans established in Milesburg, Howard and State College, so that burning of the crosses has occurred frequently and it is a ceremony in which residents are becoming less interested.

W. H. Ott Recovering.

W. H. Ott, Bellefonte carpenter, who was seriously injured when struck on the head by a heavy piece of oak timber when it fell at the new building at the Pennsylvania Match Co. plant, is able to be about again. Mr. Ott was on the street this week. He said, "The report that I had my skull fractured was not correct, though I was unconscious quite a while. The stick swerved or it would not have struck me. As it was, I had an ugly injury on my head and my nose was bruised but not broken."

Killed Fox with Stone.

Motoring along the road between Flat Rock and Tyrone last Thursday evening Homer Hess, of Philipsburg, saw a gray fox ahead of him and the animal was bewildered apparently by the lights on his car. He stopped, got a stone and hurled at the fox as it circled in the road, striking it with such a blow that it was killed.

Troop May Secure Field.

Troop B, of Bellefonte, has taken an option on the Brockerhoff land adjoining the Taylor ice pond at Roopsburg and are contemplating a rifle range and polo ground. The field will also make a good drill field and it is likely a permanent barracks will be erected upon it.

To Speak Here Sunday.

Clinton N. Howard will be in St. John's Lutheran church Sunday morning at 10:45 and in the Methodist church at 7:30. In the morning Mr. Howard will speak on 'God Remaking the World" and in the evening will take as his theme "Peace Through the Prince of Peace."

Special Session Court.

Judge Quigley will hold a special session of Court on Friday, October 19, when disposition of a number of surety of the peace, desertion and non-support cases will be made.

But One Issue in the Campaign for Sheriff

As was foreshadowed by "The Republican", one week in advance of the recent primaries, when this newspaper published an exact list of the several Democratic candidates for county offices slated by the Zerby-Kurtz-Taylor combine, the entire Democratic campaign has been centered in a drive to elect Taylor as Sheriff.

"Save Taylor" is the combine slogan.

With no convincing argument in his behalf on the ground of training, experience or efficiency, the Taylor managers are concentrating in the closing weeks of the campaign on what they call a military drive. Regardless of his fitness for the office of Sheriff, as compared with that of his Republican opponent, William H. Brown, the Taylor boomers are asking votes for him solely because he served in the World War. They make no mention of the long, honorable military career of Brown. Very artfully, they avoid allowing voters to stop and realize that as between Brown and Taylor the contest is one between two soldiers.

The reason for this is apparent. It is a well established fact, and by most persons conceded as such, that in any matter involving any two soldiers who did everything they could for their country there can be no comparison of records of services to aid one at the expense of the other. This principle is thoroughly established in military service, and we prefer to believe that Mr. Taylor would not think of denying either the existence or the justness of such a principle.

This newspaper would be the last in the world to detract from Taylor one bit of credit for his service in the World War. But he wasn't the only soldier who participated in the war, or who was in the service before the war. There were hundreds of others from Centre County. Among the number were quite a few who served faithfully for many years in the National Guard. Many of them tried to get into the war, but were rejected. Through no fault of their own they were denied the opportunity to go overseas. Having done that, we ask could they have done anything more? They did their best, and no soldier, anywhere, could do more.

Captain William H. Brown, through circumstances over which he had no control, was among the group from Centre County who tried his best to get into the war, but couldn't. The Zerby combine managers are not telling the voters about that, so we shall tell it for them.

Captain Brown's military record is one of which he may justly be proud. Everybody familiar with his record knows that to be a fact. He has given between sixteen and seventeen years, or more than one-third of his life, to the military service. There isn't a single Democratic boss in Centre County with a record anything like that. We challenge contradiction of the statement.

Twenty-five years ago Brown enlisted in Company M, 21st. Infantry, Pennsylvania National Guard. That was on Aug. 8, 1898. When that regiment was mustered out he was honorably discharged on Oct. 4, 1899. He enlisted in Company B, 5th regiment, serving as a private, corporal, sergeant and first sergeant. Later, when Company B was transferred to the 12th regiment Brown was commissioned a Second Lieutenant, and assigned to Company I, 12th infantry. This commission he served for two years, when he was promoted to Captain and assigned to charge of Company L, 12th Infantry.

This may not prove the most soothing reading to the Democratic combine managers, but they are the ones who injected the military feature into the campaign to exploit Taylor and cleverly give themselves something to hide behind. Their sole interest in the present campaign is to swing Centre County into the Democratic column for 1924, when a President is to be selected, and also pave the way for the election of a Democrat as Judge in Centre County.

When the re organization of the National Guard took place, Brown, because of his experience and ability, was requested to consider and recommend as to the advisability of changing his company of infantry into a troop of cavalry. He reported that it could be done. He was ordered to and organized and drilled the new troop, which was then known as Troop L, 1st. Penna. Cavalry. This troop subsequently served on the Mexican border and also in the early stages of the World War until the cavalry was disbanded and the men assigned to other organizations. Brown had served as Captain until December, 1915, when he resigned to devote his whole time to the office of Recorder of Deeds. When his old troop, that which he had organized, was ordered to the Mexican border, he tried to get back into the Guard, but there were no available vacancies.

When the United States entered the World War, in 1917, Brown took the stand that regardless of all else it was his duty as a plain American citizen to go into the service. He accordingly offered himself, was accepted, and on August 25th, of that year, he was sworn in as a private at Fort Niagara, New York. He was assigned to Company 1, Fort Niagara Training Regiment, where he served until October 5th, of that some year. On the latter date he was honorably discharged from the army because of physical disability.

Many persons would have, no doubt, considered that they had then done their duty, and with an honorable discharge in their pocket would not have tried to take any further part. But Brown returned home and helped drill soldiers who left Centre County for the war.

As Recorder of Deeds in charge of such records, Brown was one of the first officials, if not actually the first, to look into the future relative to the preservation and recording of soldiers' discharges. Every Civil War soldier will instantly appreciate the value of this thoughtfulness on the part of Brown, for such discharges are often lost and thereby cause endless trouble and confusion in later years. Awakening to the importance of the work Brown started here for Centre County soldiers, the Pennsylvania Legislature adopted the plan, so that even if a soldier's discharge should become lost a record of it would be on file.

That is a brief outline of Brown's service as a soldier. But he hasn't been going over the county with petitions indorsing him solely because he has been a soldier. Neither is he asking for votes in preference to Taylor simply because some parts of his soldier record happen to strike a contrast in his favor. Brown and his friends are not waging a military drive as a method of political campaigning. His candidacy is founded upon the issue of training, experience and efficiency. There is no other issue; there can be none. And after all, when the campaign is over and political smoke screens have subsided, the people—Democrats as well as Republicans—really want ability and efficiency in public office, above everything else. And that is why, when all is said and done, we are satisfied that the people of Centre County are going to elect Brown as Sheriff on Nov. 6th.

Pledges Given Only to Be Broken.

We have before us as we write a campaign card handed to a voter by a candidate for Republican nomination for District Attorney in the recent primary election campaign in Centre County.

This card has printed thereon the candidate's name, together with the following pledge: "SUBJECT TO RULES GOVERNING REPUBLICAN PARTY."

The very foundation principle of not only the Republican Party, likewise the Democratic Party, but of our form of American Government, is that of MAJORITY RULE.

The candidate who handed out the above-mentioned card bearing his photograph and name, and the foregoing pledge subscribing to the Rules of the Republican Party, was none other than Arthur C. Dale. An overwhelming majority of the Republicans of Centre County voted in favor of John Love for District Attorney in preference to this same Mr. Dale.

Did Mr. Dale, having failed to receive the Republican nomination, respect and redeem his sacred pledge to accept and abide by the will of the majority of the Republican Party? He did not. He deliberately broke that pledge. He turned his back upon his party. He has gone over to the Democratic Party, which party will have no time for him after using him as a catspaw in the present campaign. And for what? Simply with the hope of grabbing a public office and the salary that goes with it.

A man without a Party! There is no office in Centre County, or in the State, or in the Nation, worth that price.

And Mr. Dale's personal assurance to John Love that he would support him for District Attorney if Mr. Love became a candidate! Another pledge given, only to be broken.

The Democratic party is welcome to its new recruit.

B. H. S. WON; ACADEMY LOST

Local Football Teams Figured in Exciting Games Saturday.

Bellefonte football teams figured in games last Saturday that were interesting and at times exciting. Bellefonte High School got away to a flying start by defeating Philipsburg High School 42 to 0. The game was played on Hughes field and was witnessed by a large crowd. Quite a number of persons from Philipsburg were present. It was the first appearance of the Bellefonte team since Coach Nicely has been in charge of the squad and the boys played with a snap and dash that won the admiration of the crowd.

The Philipsburg boys played a splendid game. Even when they knew they were hopelessly defeated they played hard and fast and made Bellefonte work for everything the locals got.

The Academy eleven played the strong University of Penna. freshman team, at Philadelphia, losing out after a hard fight by a score of 6 to 0. The Academy eleven showed the effect of Coach Snavely's instruction and put up a game that was a pleasant surprise. Time and again when their goal was threatened the Academy took the ball from the Philadelphians on downs. The latter finally managed to score one touchdown, but failed to kick a goal. In the last quarter the Academy opened up a series of forward passes that carried the ball nearly the full length of the field, but they were unable to rush it over the line.

Penn State's football eleven defeated North Carolina, winning 16—0, at State College last Saturday. The teams were well matched and the North Carolina players worked hard to make a score but found Penn State's line impregnable.

Next Saturday, the Bellefonte High School is scheduled to play Cooper Twp. eleven on the Hughes field; the Academy the Fairmont Normal at Fairmont, W. Va., and Penn State faces Gettysburg at Beaver field.

CRASHED INTO BRIDGE

James Metcalf Sustained Serious Internal Injuries.

James Metcalf, who resides with the Roy Baldwin family at Collins row, Bellefonte, was seriously injured on Friday afternoon when his Overland touring car crashed into the iron railing of the one way bridge at Clintondale.

Mr. Metcalf and a friend from Lock Haven had gathered elderberries at Buffalo Run during the day. It was late in the afternoon when they started to drive across the bridge, enroute to Lock Haven. A loose plank caught the car under the front part of it and caused it to swerve into the railing. The auto was completely wrecked. The young woman with Metcalf was also injured. They were promptly aided by passing motorists, the former being taken to her home and Metcalf to the Lock Haven hospital. He had been crushed so that his chest was injured, near his heart, and he also had painful head injuries. Russell Miller went to the hospital the early part of the week to visit him and said he was resting easier, but still in a serious condition.

The car had just been purchased last summer and had not been driven much. It was so completely wrecked that persons who viewed the twisted and broken parts marvelled that the occupants escaped death.

Right of Way Hearing.

A hearing to decide the controversy regarding a right of way over the farms of S. H. Hoy and Clement G. Dale for the power line of the Keystone Power Corporation from Huntingdon County to Bellefonte, through the Hoy and Dale farms, is to be held in Harrisburg on October 15th. The hearing will be before the Public Service Commission and a decision regarding granting of eminent domain rights to the power company is expected. The farm owners have been vigorously fighting the attempt of the power company to extend the line over their farm lands, claiming that it is unnecessary and would be a great inconvenience on the farms as well as reducing considerably the value of the land.

Held for Court.

Following a hearing before J. M. Keichline, justice of the peace, last night, Samuel Budinger, of Snow Shoe, furnished bail in the sum of $500 for his appearance at the next term of court. Serious charges were preferred against the young man by Mrs. Mike Furl, of Runville.

State Police After Wets.

State police, in the active campaign against violators of the prohibition laws put on by Governor Pinchot, have made 3,158 arrests to Oct. 1. The arrests were classified as follows: Bootleggers, 1,449; saloon keepers, 883; moonshiners, 774, and brewers, 52.

Had a Season Ticket.

Two brothers had lived in a village near Aberdeen and had traveled to town to business every day by train. Not long ago one of them died, and the other decided to have the coffin containing the body conveyed by train to the city.

He sought the advice of the stationmaster, and was told that he would have to procure a special ticket.

"A special ticket," he gasped in dismay. "What would I do that for? His season ticket hasn't expired yet!"

Edible Drinking Cup Appears.

With the increase in popularity of water ices among patrons of refreshment pushcarts, ball park caterers and other venders the edible drinking cup is appearing. It is of graham cracker ingredients and some are lined with chocolate.

Early in the season water ices were served in paper or paraffin cups. As these were not consumable they created a problem of litter. The new kind of cup, like the cone for ice cream, provides a cake for the water ice. It is also finding a field as a container and accompaniment for soft drinks.—

Why Not?

If certain medicinal spring waters benefit human beings why should they not be good for horses who have similar bodily structures? So thought a well-known English horse trainer and his ailing horses at Doncaster are now being supplied with water from the famous Harrogate springs, in spite of laughter of his friends. Did not Epsom salts originate in a spring near the famous race course at Epsom? And is there any significance in that fact?

Her One Fault.

Detours Bring Customers.

The motoring public is frequently annoyed by signs marked "Detour" which compel them to leave a good road for a bad one for some distance. They are even more annoyed when the new route is not properly marked out and as a result they sometimes get temporarily lost. A small boy upstate, quick to grasp the situation, fashioned a few detour signs of his own which he erected and which diverted traffic by his father's house.

Then he built in his front yard a small stand at which he sold ginger ale and lemonade to the thirsty and weary travelers and did a good business until the authorities removed the signs and the street once again became a rarely traveled thoroughfare. —New York Sun and Globe.

Sure to Come Back.

"Sir Basil Zaharof, who has succeeded the Blanc family as the principal owner of Monte Carlo," said a Chicagoan, "took me one night through the gorgeous gambling rooms of the Monte Carlo casino. We halted a while at a roulette table. An Englishman was winning tremendously there. Finally the man cashed in.

"'Goodness!' I said. 'What a haul that lucky bird has made!'

"'Oh,' said Sir Basil, 'that's nothing. It makes no difference to the Casino. It's just a bit of our money sleeping out for the night.'"—Chicago Daily News.

Different.

The comedy cinema actor stopped a man he knew. "Look here," he began, "I understand you said last night that I have no sense of humor. A remark of that kind, made publicly, in the presence of other people, is very damaging to a man in my position, and—"

"Hold on," interrupted the other. "I never said you had no sense of humor. What I said was that you had no sense of honor."

"Ah!" beamed the actor, "I thought there must be some mistake. I felt certain you would never run down a pal behind his back."

Ruinous Measure.

"Does she weigh her words?"

"Yes, but if she ran a grocery store on the same basis she'd soon be bankrupt."

Why take the risk?

MANY have found by their own experience that coffee's effect is harmful. Health authorities warn against risking the growth and development of children with the drug element in coffee.

"There's a Reason"

Modern Priscilla

By MARY LEWIS

(©, 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It was one of those sultry days in spring that make even optimists dubious, and Miss Priscilla Dale felt anything but optimistic. Her spirits were low, terribly so, and she was filled with that same restless feeling that had prompted her to leave her home in the East to see what the West had in store for her. So we find her in Detroit, the guest of her aunt and cousin, and still dissatisfied.

"It's very well for poets to rave over April showers," reflected Priscilla, "but when the same showers appear consecutively for two weeks, well," and here she sighed. Well, wouldn't something happen?

Here it was, a perfectly good Sunday night, and she all alone. Of course, she might have gone to the "movies" with her aunt and cousin, but she had sweetly but firmly refused them. She didn't want the "movies," she didn't want to read. She was simply craving for human companionship or, rather, should we say, companionship of the male persuasion.

So she sat there before the telephone, ready to employ it at the slightest provocation, a pretty but distressed picture. She was pretty, too—small, boyish, with a piquant sort of charm. Her large brown eyes, now so wistful, could sparkle with merriment; her lips, now pouted, could display beautiful teeth and two adorable dimples, and her hair—now we have it—the secret of her charm—brown bobbed hair, careless little curls, so distracting.

But her height. This was the bane of her existence. It had the effect of her utter disgust for short men and much admiration for the tall ones.

But the telephone didn't ring. Nothing happened to efface the monotony. The evening had a most dreary outlook. Why didn't the phone ring? She had been in Detroit only two weeks, every day of which it had rained, and she had not as yet met any of the male sex of that city. Besides, if she was to meet anyone she must use her own resources, for her cousin, while disposed to do anything for Priscilla, assumed a seasoned depravity toward mankind and, consequently, had no friends of that sex.

Suddenly Priscilla's eyes shone mischievously. She pulled the telephone directory from its resting place, opened it at random, closed her eyes and ran her finger down the list of names. She stopped half way down the page, opened her eyes and discovered that that name "Alden" was the one on which her fate hung. And now for a first name. "In every American home," she reflected, "is a John." Well, John she was to ask for. She laughed. Such a combination. Little Priscilla asking for John Alden. It was so ludicrous. No, she wouldn't go through with it. Then she recalled the sweet little love story of John Alden and Priscilla and then the thought struck her that in that instance Priscilla had taken the first bold step. So would she.

She called the number and waited nervously for results. The voice of an old man answered. "Is John in?" she inquired. Whereupon she was told that there was no John in that family.

"But isn't there some young man?" Yes, there was an Arthur.

So she assured the old man that it must be Arthur that she wanted.

It seemed such a long time before Arthur answered, and when he did it was with a delicious little thrill that she listened to his low, well-modulated and friendly voice. Then followed the inevitable explanation of his number having been left at her home. Of course she didn't know anyone in Detroit—she had just come from the East—so it was a mistake—how careless—a hundred apologies, and her heart sank. Was it to end thus?

But it didn't. They talked and talked and during the course of their conversation discovered so many, many things in common and he was sure she was the type he liked, he loved her "line," and couldn't they meet? Wouldn't she at least leave her number?

Priscilla was firm. She would call again, and she did, and many times, too, and while she learned lots about him, his music, his hobbies, still she was reticent concerning her own affairs, and exceedingly cruel in not permitting him to meet her.

At last he extracted the promise from her that if in a week he learned who she was, and other things about her, she would allow him to call. She promised—in fact she would have promised almost anything, she was so certain he would be unsuccessful. The next evening when they were talking and she was called away by her aunt for a few minutes, he signaled the operator, found out the number, and continued the conversation when she returned.

It was all so simple.

The next morning he called and spoke with Priscilla's aunt, who, like the simple soul she was, answered all his queries.

At night, when Arthur called Priscilla and told her what he knew about her, including the fact that she was short and had bobbed hair, Priscilla felt morally bound to see him. She never realized how pleasant it was to have moral obligations.

Priscilla had one great fear, however, this being the suspicion that he was short of stature. Despite his charm, this item in itself was sufficient to condemn him in her eyes. Didn't he sound especially enthusiastic when she admitted being short? She would take no chances, and in consequence thereof she asked Tillie, her unattractive neighbor, who resembled Priscilla in so far as height and bobbed hair were concerned, to take her place. Tillie was accommodating.

At last the bell rang and Tillie answered. She admitted two young men. One of them was short, the other tall. The shorter one introduced himself as Mr. Arthur Alden. Behind the portieres Priscilla watched. Wasn't she clever, though, to call Tillie—but still she felt a huge disappointment. Anyway, the tall young man was altogether quite nice looking. Perhaps she would go in, after all.

Giving herself a last critical survey in the mirror, she entered the room.

"I couldn't resist the music," she murmured sweetly, "and besides, I was so awfully lonesome."

To think of one so sweet, so young and so charming being lonesome. The tall young man saw to it that she wasn't lonesome any more. They danced, they talked and then a voice whispered in Priscilla's ear, "There's a Priscilla Dale in this room, and it's you."

Priscilla beamed.

"And there's an Arthur Alden in this room, and it's you," and Priscilla gazed into a pair of laughing eyes.

"It has been so lovely, my meeting you," cooed Priscilla. "You're just what I hoped for and only half expected.

The evening was a success. Then followed tennis and dancing and golfing and so many, many things for Arthur and Priscilla.

A few months later, on a sultry Sunday night, a young man looked down into a pair of shining brown eyes and whispered, "My little adorable Priscilla, you have made me so very happy," and Priscilla murmured, "My wonderful, wonderful man."

WAY TO MAKE A CAMP BED

Cut Down a White Fir, Use Boughs for Springs and Break Off Tips for "Feathers."

Can you make a really comfortable camp bed? Have you ever tried to? Much of the comfort of camping depends on the kind of bed you have; a good night's rest is the best preparation for a good day's work or fun. Most of us who have tried are of the opinion that the most satisfactory bed is one made of boughs, and if it is well made there is no doubt that a bed of this kind is, in wood parlance, "all right."

To get the best material, you will have to cut down a tree six or eight inches in diameter at the butt. By reason of their flat-curved form, the boughs of the white fir, or balsam, are the best for the purpose; those of the western fir are next in value. You get your "feathers" by breaking off the tips of the main branches twelve or fourteen inches from the ends. The stems are to furnish the springs for the beds and should be at least half an inch in diameter where broken off. The branches of very small trees and those near the top of the large ones, as well as the laterals of large limbs, make poor beds.

Having secured enough material, and having chosen a piece of smooth ground which is level, or with a very slight slope toward the foot, proceed to make the bed. A pile a foot wide and of about the same height is first made across the head. This is the "bolster." You will probably use the softer portions of your spare baggage—your clothes-bag, for instance—for a pillow.

Next take a handful of the "feathers," and pressing the stems firmly into the ground, lean them against the bolster, placing them so that the butts are nearly vertical and the general slope toward the head is only about that of the curve. Lay a tier across the width of the bed, another tier against that, and so on—as shingles are laid on a roof—till a sufficient length is covered.—Sportsman's Digest.

First to Try Vaccination.

The first inoculation for smallpox was performed at Belgrade, Serbia, 205 years ago, when Lady Mary Wortley Montagu caused her infant son to be inoculated with the virus for the purpose of warding off an attack of disease.

Lord Montagu was British ambassador at Constantinople. Lady Mary's brother had died of smallpox, and she herself had been terribly disfigured by the disease. She determined to experiment with the Turkish practice of "ingrafting" to save her son. Upon returning to England she earnestly sought to introduce inoculation, but the medical profession was solidly against her. Clergymen also pronounced inoculation a presumption which God would certainly punish.

At length four condemned criminals were inoculated and, the test proving successful, inoculation was gradually taken up by the medical profession.

Why He Picked Her.

As the train approached the dark tunnel the man turned to the strange lady at his side.

"When we are in this tunnel," he said, calmly, "I shall kiss you."

"Sir," she said icily, "how dare you! I am a lady!"

"That's just the reason I am going to kiss you," replied the young man. "If I preferred a man I'd call the conductor."—Penn. State Froth.

Like Looking at the Sun

Looking into one of the huge rotary kilns where the raw materials for cement are burned into clinker is just like looking at the noonday sun.

The terrific heat required makes a glare of light so intense that the glowing flame would temporarily blind you.

But borrow the workman's colored goggles to protect your eyes while you take another look into the kiln. Then you will see a tornado of powdered coal—or gas or spraying oil—bursting into a sheet of sunwhite flame.

Into the other end of the kiln flow the powdered limestone and shale [clay]—the raw materials for cement.

As the slowly revolving kiln tumbles the materials about, they are subjected to gradually increasing heat. During their three-hour journey through this inferno, moisture and gases are first given off. Finally as the powdered materials reach the sunwhite flame, they half melt into glass-hard balls called "clinker." This clinker, an entirely new chemical compound, when finely powdered is portland cement.

Portland cement kilns consume great quantities of fuel—30 pounds of coal or its equivalent for each 94-pound sack of cement. For the whole cement making process the consumption of coal is approximately 50 pounds a sack—more than half a ton of coal to a ton of cement.

DAM RIVER TO STOP FLOOD

Barrage Type Constructed in South Africa to Prevent Collecting of Mud in Reservoir.

After seven years of building, a dam that stops a 40-mile river in South Africa was recently completed. A barrage type was chosen to prevent collecting of mud and earth in the reservoir and to avoid flooding of private property on the river banks. In the average year enough dirt is carried down this river to cover 720 acres a depth of six inches. Passing through tanks and filters and being treated with chemicals clears the water. Thirty-six sluice gates control the huge barrage, 1,400 feet long. When full, the depth of the water will be 25 feet. At the formal opening a British prince officiated.—Popular Mechanics.

Auto Ads Take Freak Shapes.

For advertising purposes the wild business getter has never overlooked the possibilities of the automobile. Many are the cars with big painted signs on them proclaiming the advantages of some one's particular flour or the merits of so and so's cheese. They attract considerable attention, but in no way nearly as much as those freak-bodied automobiles designed to resemble a bottle or a shoe, or some such thing with the driver's compartment carefully concealed inside. Most of these are familiar sights, but it remained for a most novel of all—a miniature house on wheels. Perfect in every exterior detail, it represents a suburban residence, and when first sighted coming around a corner is startling.—New York Sun and Globe.

Her Secret.

On the occasion of her hundredth birthday the village centenarian received a visit from the vicar.

Judge Escapes Pirates, Quakes

Dayton, O., Jurist Tells of Experiences on Trip to Orient—Saw Upheaval in Java.

New York.—For some time the region which has just been swept by the great earthquake has had lesser quakes, according to Judge Charles W. Dustin of Dayton, Ohio, who recently returned from a trip around the world. Judge Dustin spent much time in the Orient and had many thrilling experiences.

"My trip was all without accident or mishap of any kind, although I had several narrow escapes," said Judge Dustin. "In China, I was on one steamer that had shortly before been captured by pirates and hence was provided with an armed guard. The passage from the second class to the first class cabins was, also, barred by an iron door. The plan of the pirates had been to ship as second class passengers and, at a signal, to attack and rob the first class. Another steamer was, a week or so after my passage on her, captured, robbed and beached. Later she was floated and resumed her voyage.

Was On "Million-Dollar Train."

"I was also a passenger on the celebrated 'Million-Dollar Train,' which was, two weeks later, captured by bandits and its occupants robbed and held for ransom. And, strangely enough, that train was held up at about the same locality, not by bandits, but by a wreck. We were detained for 12 hours and hundreds of natives came down from the mountains and looked us over, finally concluding that we were not worth robbing and let us alone.

"I was in Peking when the police struck because their wages had not been paid, and in Yokohama, Japan, when there was a very distinct earthquake shock. While I was in Java there was an upheaval and an island thrown up in the neighboring sea over which I had but recently sailed.

"So I was not without thrills—mostly of gratitude—for the continuing care, may I presume, of guardian angels.

China On Verge of Chaos.

"I am not scared or discouraged by the dangers of travel in the Orient and I hope soon to make another tour to more out-of-the-way places. I shall probably, however, omit China until it has a stable government. At present there is one government in the north with a parliament and an official class, but without credit or an efficient personnel. About the only tax which it is able to collect and use for the most necessary purposes is the 'salt tax.'

"In the south there is only a tentative government, with a few soldiers and no parliament. Able men are attempting to establish a government there and overthrow the one in the north, but it, too, has no credit and little cash.

"Fortunately the leading men of China were educated in American and English universities, are high-toned gentlemen and even religiously inclined; and as a race the Chinese people despise war. They admire scholarship above everything and not military genius. A soldier is classed with the butcher. They have bandits and outlaws like other nations, but they are few in proportion and when caught are summarily dealt with. A more belligerent people would have been in revolution long before this.

"Ancestor worship continues in China. There is a temple at Canton especially devoted to it.

Country Dotted With Graves.

"There are no general cemeteries in China and the dead are buried wherever it is most convenient for the family. The very poor of a city are buried in the city 'commons.' The surrounding land may be cultivated, but the graves themselves, usually conical mounds, are sacredly preserved. The consequence is that the whole country is dotted with graves, the veneration for which interferes with the construction of railroads and highways. When a Chinaman dies away from home his remains are cared for until it is convenient and sanitary to remove the same to the family neighborhood. The principal use of undertakers is in caring for bodies pending removal.

"In the great city of Peking there are no tramcars. People get about in carts and jinrickishas. Motor cars are in use, and tear through the few wide streets with reckless indifference to pedestrians. Oriental chauffeurs are generally speed fiends.

"The Chinese have a convenient plan for meeting the rise and fall in temperature. When winter comes they simply put on more suits—suits to suit, so to speak. These are peeled off in the spring and by summer they are almost down to 'bedrock.'

"Japan shows great progress since I was there 20 years ago. Tokyo had some great office buildings, like those in American cities, and a new Imperial hotel that attracts much attention and comment on account of its novel and artistic features. There is nothing quite like it anywhere in the world and it is much discussed in the press and in private by architects and travelers. It is a great pity that it was destroyed."

Plate Marks Pew Used by Harding

Juneau, Alaska.—A brass plate now marks the pew in the Indian Presbyterian church at Sitka where the late President Harding attended public religious services for the last time before his death at San Francisco. On the plate are inscribed the words: "President Harding occupied this pew on Sunday, July 22, 1913; his last attendance at public worship."

Only a few members of the President's immediate party accompanied him to the church, and it was not generally known he was to attend services there. When the collection plate was passed, the President dropped in a gold coin. The sermon was preached by Rev. R. A. Buchanan.

Will Hunt for Pirate's Gold

Aged Resident of Lewiston, Me., Says He Saw Captain Kidd's Chest in Sheepscot River.

Lewiston, Me.—Moses King, Jr., ninety-odd years of age, of this city, has seen part of the lost treasure of Captain Kidd and has now invented a dredge with which he expects to recover the lost gold from the mud of the Sheepscot river, Maine. The construction of the dredge and the proposed expedition in search of the buried treasure is being financed by a Dr. Wing, whose place of residence Mr. King refuses to divulge at this time.

"When I was about twenty years of age," tells Mr. King, "I was one of the company which my father took to the Sheepscot river to hunt for this pirate gold of Captain Kidd. With him, beside myself, was a man named Trask and a professional diver. While father was the head of the expedition, the whole program originated from the story Trask told my parent.

Kin of Buccaneers.

"According to Trask, his great-grandfather was one of the buccaneers who sailed with Captain Kidd. This elder Trask was one of the crew which helped Kidd to dispose of the loot they secured from their victims in the Sheepscot river. He left a will in which he gave the treasure to the fourth generation of his family. This brought it down to the man who went with father and me to hunt for it more than seventy years ago. According to the map and will, or whatever other directions Trask had, the spot where the treasure was buried was about four miles above the town of Wiscasset, Me., in the bottom of the river.

"We went to the place as near as was possible and for a period of about two months the diver searched the river bottom but without success.

Chest Found by Diver.

"This diver, who was a Scotchman, in addition to hunting over the bottom and probing into the mud in the hope of locating the treasure, used a device which he had invented for locating gold.

"At the end of two months he one day located a great chest in the mud of the river bottom. It was such a one as would be expected to be used by a pirate in which to keep his gold. Our expedition had no equipment ready then with which to hoist the chest to the surface, so the spot was marked by a keg buoy anchored there. The next day we returned with chains, cables and windlasses with which to raise the chest, but the buoy was gone and during the night the action of the water had so changed the sand and mud of the river bottom that the diver was unable to locate the chest.

Hoisted Up on Anchor.

"A couple of days later a vessel anchored near that spot and when her anchor was hoisted to the cat head, there on one of the flukes was a great chest, but it gave way and sank to the bottom before it could be secured. Our diver searched for a time longer and then the quest was given up."

According to Mr. King, Dr. Wing heard of this story some four years ago from a friend of the Lewiston man. He was interested and sought Mr. King and told him that he would finance experiments in the building of a machine for grappling for this treasure and for an expedition to get it. The offer was accepted and the machine now being experimented with in the vacant lot near the home of Mr. King in Lewiston's suburbs is the result.

It is a scoop-like arrangement, attached to a powerful derrick, which can be lowered into the water, with its several rake-like arms wide open and then, when on the bottom, brought to a close, in doing which it digs down into the mud for some ten feet, over a radius of more than 20 feet in diameter, bringing up any sizable object which may be there.

Already Mr. King and Dr. Wing have made a survey of the Sheepscot river and Mr. King has located the points where his father's expedition worked more than seventy years ago.

NURSE FINDS A PERFECT REMEDY

"From my long experience as a nurse I do not hesitate to say that I consider Tanlac Nature's most perfect remedy," recently declared Mrs. I. A. Borden, 425 Pontius Ave., Seattle, Wash. Mrs. Borden is a graduate of the National Temperance Hospital, Chicago, and her wide experience in caring for the sick lends particular emphasis to her statement.

"I have used Tanlac exclusively for seven years in the treatment of my charity patients," continued Mrs. Borden, "and my experience has been that, for keeping the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels functioning properly and for toning up the system in general, Tanlac has no equal. Recently I had a woman patient who could not even keep water on her stomach for fifteen minutes. Six bottles of Tanlac fixed her up so she could eat absolutely anything. Another patient, a man, seemed unable to digest any food at all. Three bottles of Tanlac put him in such fine shape he went back to work. These two cases are typical. My confidence in Tanlac is unlimited."

CHILDLESS HOMES MADE HAPPY

Presence of Little Ones a Great Blessing

Four Interesting Letters

Cortland, N. Y.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I was weak and wanted to become strong and have a child. My husband read about it in the 'Cortland Standard' and thought it might help me. It certainly did for I now have a lovely boy fifteen months old who weighs forty pounds. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to my friends and you can certainly use my testimonial in your little books and in the newspapers, as it might help to make some other childless home happy by the presence of little ones as it has done mine."—Mrs. CLAUDE P. CANFIELD, 10 Salisbury St., Cortland, N. Y.

A Message to Mothers

Hamilton, Ohio.—"I have known about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound since girlhood, having taken it when I was younger and suffering from a weakness and backache. Lately I have taken it again to strengthen me before the birth of my child, as I was troubled with pains in my back and a lifeless, weak feeling. I think if mothers would only take your wonderful medicine they would not dread childbirth as they do. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to every woman."—Mrs. JOS. FALCOIN, JR., 552 S. 11th Street, Hamilton, Ohio.

St. Louis, Mo.—"I want to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me seven years ago. I was run down and had a weakness such as women often have. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and after being married sixteen years became the mother of a sweet little girl. I now have four lovely children—three fine boys and the little girl six years old. I had longed for children all the while and wept many a day and envied every woman with a child. I was 36 years old when my first baby was born. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any woman who is ailing with female weakness."—Mrs. J. NAUMANN, 1517 Benton St., St. Louis, Mo.

Was Weak and Run Down

St. Louis, Mo.—"My mother took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I was a girl, and when I was troubled with cramps I took it, and later when I married I again took it to make me strong as the doctor said I was weak and run down and could not have children. I took it and got along fine and now I have three girls. So you know why I keep the Compound in the house. I am a well woman and do my work and sewing too."—Mrs. JULIUS HARTMAN, 2501 W. Dodier St., St. Louis, Mo.

MORE FRESHMEN FOR COLLEGE

Penn State Plans to Take 100 New Students.

An additional class of one hundred freshmen is to be admitted to the Pennsylvania State College at the beginning of the second half of the college year next January.

"This unusual step is taken to keep the college going at full capacity at all times and to maintain 100 per cent teaching efficiency," says President John M. Thomas. He explains that vacancies caused by mid-year graduation and by students dropping out of college for various reasons should be filled when there is such a great demand existing for higher education. The usual entrance requirements must be met, according to the college registrar, Prof. W. S. Hoffman, who is prepared to receive applications.

Over 1000 freshmen were admitted at Penn State on September 12, and as many turned away. At this time the college is at full capacity of 3300 students, but more than 100 are expected to be graduated or leave by January 28, when the second semester starts. It is expected that those entering in the mid-year class will have opportunity to make up for lost time through summer session work and graduate with the regular class that entered in September.

Offers Prizes to Employes.

The Pennsylvania Railroad System is offering approximately $1,000 in prizes in an essay contest, open to all employes, on the subject of "The benefits of employe ownership of stock and securities of the Pennsylvania Railroad through the Employes' Provident and Loan Association." In each of the four operating regions, at Altoona works, and in the general offices, three prizes are being offered for the best essays written by the employes. The first prize will be two shares of stock in the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, the second prize one share of stock, and the third prize a credit on the books of the Provident and Loan Association amounting to half the cost of one share of stock. In all, eighteen shares of Pennsylvania Railroad capital stock will be awarded outright and half payment on six other shares will be credited to the winners. The essays are limited to 500 words and the contest throughout the System is being conducted under the auspices of the Pennsylvania News, the regional newspaper for employes.

Organize Golf Association.

The Central Counties Golf Association of Pennsylvania was organized by representatives of 7 country clubs in the central territory last Saturday following an invitation inter-club tournament at the new Centre Hills country club of State College. Blairmont, of Hollidaysburg; Altoona Cricket Club; Birch Hill, of Lewistown; Huntingdon, Tyrone; Nittany, of Bellefonte, and Centre Hills are the charter members. The Lock Haven, Philipsburg and Clearfield clubs will be invited to join the association. The following officers were elected: President, R. H. Smith, of Centre Hills; vice-president, O. C. Skinner, of Birch Hill; secretary-treasurer, A. R. Warnock, of Centre Hills; chairman of tournament committee, L. Cannon, of the Altoona Cricket club.

Railroads Operated Efficiently.

Robert S. Binkerd, vice chairman of the public relations committee of the eastern railroads, speaking at a meeting of the district convention of the Kiwanis club at Jaffa Temple, in Altoona, last Friday, told of how much more efficiently the railroads of the United States have been operated the past few years as compared with those years preceding when they were operated by the government. Operating expenses have been reduced approximately $1,000,000,000 a year, according to Mr. Binkerd, and this is due more especially to increased efficiency and economy than to cutting of wages, the latter reductions causing a saving of perhaps a third of the total amount. "The annual transportation service produced by the railroads is equivalent to hauling 4,000 tons for every man, woman and child in the U. S.," said Mr. Binkerd. "To produce this by motor truck would cost over half our national income. By railroad it costs from 8 to 10% of our national income."

Read it Wrong.

"Close of Business" at the end of a statement published by the Miners bank of West Hazleton was misunderstood when read by a miner, who had his money deposited in the bank. As a result a run was made on the bank that kept business lively and an unusually exciting tinge in the atmosphere until the piles of money displayed and an affidavit signed by the miner, showing that he had misunderstood, gave the depositors new confidence in the institution. The miner who started the run, when he read the statement, "Close of Business," started the erroneous report that the bank was to close and it spread like wildfire.

Proving Successful.

The officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. seem more and more pleased with the plan to haul empty freight cars over the Lewisburg and Tyrone branch to decrease congestion on the lower Bald Eagle valley. Several trains a night are being hauled this way now and in railroad circles it is said as many as 6 big trains a night will soon be passing through here. Eventually, it is quite likely, new and heavy rails will be laid through Penn's valley and much more railroad traffic will go this way.

Red Cross Nurse Report.

The report of the Red Cross nurse, Mrs. Merrill Hagen, for the month of September, is as follows: Nursing care visits, 41; instruction, 54; investigation, 4; miscellaneous, 51; visits to schools, 18. Total, 163. Attendance of babies at clinic, 13; individuals treated at office, 7; number of hours spent in office, 24. The Red Cross roll call will begin Sunday, Nov. 4 and close Nov. 11.

OVER THE COUNTY

Attempting to snatch an ear of corn from a stalk as a corn cutting machine was being pulled through the field, a horse in a team owned by Clement Luse, of near Centre Hall, made a misstep, fell and broke its neck.

Foster W. Frazier fractured his left arm at the wrist when he fell from a ladder while picking peaches at his home along Sinking creek, east of Centre Hill. Dr. Longwell, of Centre Hall, reduced the fracture.

Last week mention was made in these columns of a horse belonging to J. W. Winklebiech, of near Woodward, that had the frog of one front foot cut entirely away because of it being injured when a corn stubble was broken off and part of the stubble remained in the foot. The horse died of blood poisoning.

Children playing with matches about the straw stack on the Clarence Blazier farm, near Linden Hall, are blamed for causing a fire that resulted in a loss of $7,000, partly covered by insurance. The flames were fanned by a brisk wind and swept from the straw stack to the barn, then to the dwelling, destroying them and all outbuildings. Neighbors formed a bucket brigade but the wind made their efforts almost useless. Some of the implements and most of the household goods were saved but everything in the barn, including the season's crops, was destroyed.

Hugh Brown, formerly of Millheim, has entered Temple University, Philadelphia, to study dentistry.

Some Penn's valley farmers claim that large areas in their corn fields were visited by grub worms, which destroyed the roots of the corn and decreased the crop considerably.

Paul Myers, a son of William Myers, of Millheim, while assisting several young men to close the door on a box car, met with a very painful experience. The door, which had been sticking stubbornly, suddenly loosened and closed on the end of young Myers thumb of his left hand, pinching it so severely that it took off the end of the thumb, which stuck fast to the door. He was accompanied to the office of Dr. Musser at Aaronsburg, and the injury dressed.

The big annual event at Spring Mills—Community Day—will be observed tomorrow. The morning will include a program for the children with movies and health talk. The afternoon program includes a general meeting with popular speakers to discuss agriculture and education. The "Strolling Players," of the Pennsylvania State College, will present the evening entertainment. The home-making department of the vocational school will serve sandwiches and coffee at noon. In the evening, they will serve a delicious chicken dinner. There will be exhibits of livestock and farm products.

Harry Turner Dead.

Harry Turner died at his home on South Potter street on Saturday morning, his death being very unexpected. The deceased was engaged in truck farming and dray work, being widely known in this section and held in high esteem. For some time past he had been afflicted by heart attacks and had consulted a physician. He seemed well on Saturday and was about his work, when he suddenly became very ill and died in the yard as he was being assisted to the house, before a physician could be summoned. The deceased formerly resided in Upper Bald Eagle valley, moving to Bellefonte a number of years ago. He was a son of William and Elsie Turner and was born at Fleming on Feb. 24, 1856. On April 16, 1885, he married Miss Catherine Sharp. Surviving are his widow and four children: Clarence and Mrs. May Hanley, of Buffalo, N. Y., whom he and Mrs. Turner visited on the Sunday excursion on Sept. 23; Hugh and Irene, at home; and the following brothers and sisters: George R., of Munson; Stewart, of N. J.; Mrs. John Askins and Miss Louisa Turner, of Fleming, and Miss Mary, of Washington, D. C. Funeral services were held at the home on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock by Rev. E. E. McKelvey. Burial was made in Dix Run cemetery near Unionville.

William J. Hanna Dead.

William J. Hanna, a native of Penn's valley, died in the Renovo hospital on last Thursday evening after an illness of three weeks. When Mr. Hannah first became ill he went to the Teah hospital in Lock Haven, remaining one week for treatment. He then returned to the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Buck, of Renovo, with whom he resided. Becoming seriously ill, he was taken to the Renovo hospital, where he lingered for ten days. Born at Spring Mills, on Jan. 20, 1863, the deceased went to Renovo 30 years ago and made good. He was employed for a number of years as a bookkeeper in a large store, then purchased a big department store, which he subsequently sold to again follow bookkeeping and clerical work, having been engaged in several stores and some years ago he accepted a position as a store attendant with the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. in the Renovo shops, which position he held at the time he became ill. He was a member of the Knights of Malta. Two brothers, John Hanna, of Lemont, and James Hanna, of Hopewell, Pa., survive. Funeral services were held on Sunday afternoon and burial was made at North Bend cemetery.

Mrs. Rella Eckenroth Dead.

Mrs. Rella Eckenroth, of Pleasant Gap, died on Sunday from asthma and heart trouble. Death came very unexpectedly to Mrs. Eckenroth. She was sitting in a chair, conversing with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Herman, of Bellefonte, and Mrs. Harry Confer, a daughter, when she collapse and passed away. The deceased was born in Pleasant Gap 57 years ago, her maiden name being Rella Armstrong. She was among the best known residents of that section and was held in high esteem by a wide circle of friends. Surviving are her husband, the following children: Dorse, Joshua, Harry, Mrs. Calvin Lontz, Mrs. Harvey Hoy, Mrs. Walter Houtz and Mrs. Harry Confer, all of Pleasant Gap; and three brothers: John, of Pleasant Gap; Frank and Dan, of Missouri. Funeral services were held in the Lutheran church at Pleasant Gap on Wednesday afternoon and burial made at Pleasant Gap.

Dr. C. T. Aiken Honored.

Dr. Charles T. Aikens, president of Susquehanna University at Selinsgrove, and formerly of Ferguson Township, who is one of Centre County's boys who has made good in a marked degree, was honored specially when the splendid Susquehanna Trail stretch of concrete highway was completed, Dr. Aikens tying the golden link that connected both ends of the Susquehanna Trail. The completion of this piece of road affords a continuous highway of concrete from Buffalo, N. Y., to Baltimore, Md. Many Centre County motorists enjoy the drive to Harrisburg and the concrete will add much pleasure to such trips.

James T. Heath Dead.

James T. Heath, who was married three years ago to Miss Grace Packer, of Bellefonte, died last Thursday in Mercy hospital, Altoona, three hours after he had submitted to an operation for the removal of his tonsils. Deceased was a veteran of the World war and served overseas. He had been employed as a brakeman on the Pittsburg division of the Pennsylvania railroad and resided in Altoona. Surviving are his widow, his parents and several brothers and sisters, all of Broad Top.

Anthony Axeman Dead.

Anthony Axeman, father of James Earl Axeman, of State College, was found dead in bed at his home in Williamsport on Monday morning. Death was due to heart trouble although Mr. Axeman had apparently been in good health. He was 64 years old. Surviving are his widow; two sons, James Earl, of State College, and Carl, of Galeton, and one daughter, Mrs. R. F. Copper, of Williamsport.

Howard Leech Dead.

Howard Leech, of Orviston, died on Saturday night from acute indigestion. He was 45 years old and is survived by his widow and family.

Streams Are Low.

Streams are unusually low in many parts of the country on account of continued dry weather and yesterday quite a number of persons watched with interest the many beautiful trout in the pools in Spring creek, near the Falls. The trout had left their usual haunts, the water being so low, and had mostly gathered in one place where they were so plentiful that they seemed to swarm, reminding one of the scenes in the fish hatchery ponds where the larger trout are kept. The water was so low yesterday that only in a few places did it trickle over the Falls, most of it sweeping into the race to supply power for the Ulsh and Bashoar mill, which is handicapped just now by the scanty flow.

We Are A Thrifty People

There are 26,000,000 people in the United States who have saving accounts. They have saved and own, the vast sum of $17,300,000,000, an average of $665 each.

Does this money belong to the rich? Oh no. Most of these people are in very moderate circumstances—many of them are poor; But they realize that it is better to practice a little self denial now, than to suffer and possibly be humiliated later on.

ARE YOU ONE OF THESE WISE ONES?

Howard

Whereas, certain persons have been going from house to house, in Howard and vicinity, soliciting funds for various charitable institutions, missions, etc., without representing any recognized religious sect, and have been found out to be impostors, we, the undersigned, feel it our duty to sound a warning note and kindly ask the public to be on the lookout and be sure that the cause to which they are asked to contribute will receive the benefit of their contribution instead of the solicitor working on a false pretense, filling his own pockets. We also hereby, warn all fake missionaries and solicitors to immediately leave the community or the most strenuous measures will be resorted to in order to rid the neighborhood of such pests.

New Traffic Guides.

New traffic guides will be tried out at the Bishop and Allegheny Sts. corner and at High and Spring Sts. The new guides are familiarly known as "Stop and Go" signs, used with success in many places. Officer George Glenn will be at the Bishop St. corner as usual and Thomas Howley at Spring and High Sts. It is understood that traffic regulations will be more strictly enforced.

Wedding Announced.

Invitations have been received for the wedding of Miss Catherine Lukenbach, a daughter of Frank Lukenbach, and Lloyd Tyson, a son of William Tyson, both of Tyrone, on Saturday evening, October 20th.

HON. JOHN NOLL DEAD

Hardening of Arteries Caused Death Last Night.

Hon. John Noll, who had been ill for a year or more from hardening of the arteries, died last night at 9:15 o'clock at his home on East Bishop street.

The deceased was born on the Noll farm just east of Pleasant Gap on Sept. 20, 1845, making his age at time of death 78 years. He resided always in this vicinity, conducting for many years the Noll laundry on Water street until the building was destroyed by fire some years ago. In his early life he was contractor and erected the Col. Reynolds and Hastings residences and first Bellefonte Trust Co. building.

He was one of the old school Democrats of Centre County and served in the State Legislature from 1905 to 1908. He was a charter member of the Masons, a member of the Elks, Golden Eagles and Royal Arcanum, also an active member of the Presbyterian church. During the Civil war he served faithfully, enlisting on Feb. 25, 1864, in Co. A, 19th P. V. cavalry, and was promoted to corporal on June 1, 1860, to sergeant, March 18 1866, and honorably discharged on June 5, 1866, at Philadelphia.

He was a son of Samuel and Rebecca Noll, and married Miss Mary W. Hamilton, a daughter of James Hamilton, in 1860, at Milesburg. Surviving are two daughters: Miss Bertha Noll, at home; Mrs. George Van Dyke, of Wilkinsburg; one son, Charles, of Altoona, and one sister, Mrs. Lucy Stine, of Lovell, Okla.

Funeral services will be held on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the home. Burial in Union cemetery.

BLACK BEARS BOLD

Motorists Find Them Crossing Road at Night.

Joseph DeLong and a party from Blanchard, while motoring home a few nights ago after a trip to Lock Haven, spied a black bear crossing the road ahead of the auto. The bear crossed the main highway just beyond the Brown school house, near Beech Creek. It seemed unusually bold for bruin to be prowling about in the Bald Eagle valley so far from the mountains but he did not attempt to harm anyone.

B. Frank Bowers, of Beech Creek, motoring to Orviston, was startled when he saw a black bear along the mountain road between Monument and Orviston. Bowers was delivering a load of furniture and was anxious to get back to Monument to work the next day. He almost ran against the bear and stalled the engine of the truck, when he stopped quickly. The lights on the auto, of course, went out and Bowers was alone in the dark with Mr. Bear. But bruin was apparently just as startled, as the noise he made in a hurried getaway in the brush, indicated.

SAM HOUSTON TWICE MARRIED

His First Venture Unfortunate, but His Second Had Good Effect on His Life.

Long after Gen. Sam Houston's death, the mystery of his separation from his first wife was solved by means of some private letters which fell into the hands of his heirs. His first wife, Eliza Allen, a Nashville belle, before she met Houston had been engaged to a Tennesseean named Douglass. Houston was governor of Tennessee when he fell in love with Miss Allen. Her ambitious parents caused her to break with Douglass and accept the famous young governor. Still loving Douglass, she was married to Houston. Three months later Houston had discovered, somehow, that his adoration was lavished on a woman who had been sold to him by her parents and who cared for another man. Houston, heartbroken, behaved in heroic fashion. He gave up everything, left his home and high office, took himself wholly out of his wife's life, and bore without contradiction the vile rumors that were circulated about him. Mrs. Houston, after her husband had wrecked his career for her sake, obtained a divorce on the ground of abandonment and was married to Douglass.

After leaving his wife, Houston resigned the governorship and went among the Indians. Three years later he threw his lot with the Texans. Under his leadership the Mexicans were defeated and Texas was established as a republic. Houston was not content; he caused the annexation of Texas to the United States. In April, 1830, his wife having obtained a divorce, he married Margaret Moffette of Alabama, who exercised an ennobling and restraining force over him.

TRULY "RIGHT CLEVER NAME"

Wonder What the Unfortunate Youngster Will Think About It When He Grows Up.

The woman, to oblige a friend, recently included in a trip up town the delivery of a message to that friend's laundress. Eliza Jackson, the laundress, was colored and lived, according to directions, on the fourth floor of a dingy brick apartment in Harlem. The woman, having identified the street and number, climbed what appeared to be a secret staircase that grew no lighter as she ascended.

Mrs. Jackson was discovered ironing pillow cases in an apartment consisting of one room and laundryette. About the room swarmed several little Jacksons. The youngest was one of those irresistible chocolate-colored infants with eyes like brown pansies. The woman capitulated immediately. Having stated her errand she sat down to court him and, of course, asked his name.

"His name is Fertilizer—Fertilizer Jackson," said his mother, with her hands set proudly upon her hips.

"Fertilizer!" the woman raised astonished brows.

"I reckon that's a right clever name and high soundin'," explained Mrs. Jackson complacently. "Yuh see, his father's name's Ferdinand, an' mine's Eliza, an' so we jes' nat'rally put one and two together, an' called him Fertilizer."—New York Sun.

GAS USED TO FOIL THIEVES

Really Ingenious Contrivance That Will Not Be Appreciated by the "Cracksmen."

Some of our property losses have resulted from the inroads of cracksmen who succeeded in getting into a number of our vaults and safes.

Recently an inventive fellow with a knowledge of deadly gases decided to capitalize his understanding of poison gases, so he perfected a fragile glass container that is now being employed to protect all kinds of depositories from thieves. Any movement of the door to which the gas container is attached, or any unusual jar, such as would result from an explosion, breaks the container and releases the fluid, which kills the burglars instantly. Any effort to remove the vial by drilling it from the door likewise releases the gas.

It would be a grand thing, from the standpoint of safeguarding property, if some of these gas containers could be attached to many other kinds of private possessions; but such a suggestion would likely be inconsistent with my present effort to set down ways to conserve life.—Floyd W. Parsons in the Saturday Evening Post.

Poitiers' Powder Puffs.

Poitiers was famous in days gone by for the great victory over the French when the Black Prince took King John of France a prisoner, and waited on him as his guest. But Poitiers is best known today for its geese, which have the purest white feathers of any species, and their skins are readily transmuted into "fur." It is mainly from the soft plumage of these birds that powder puffs are made. The whiteness of the feather is attributed to bathing in the local waters, which contain salts of lithia. Humbler parts of the goose's wardrobe become dusting brushes, toothpicks, and other unheroic but useful wares. The goose farmers of Poitiers, have bred geese for centuries mainly on account of their skins and down.

Pacific Coast Indians.

The origin of the art of the Pacific coast Indians is a subject which has puzzled students in their investigations into the relations between the people of North America and the peoples of the rest of the world. The resemblance in facial feature between the so-called Siwash and the Mongolian race is in some cases so marked that it is commonly believed that the Pacific coast Indian is descended from a wandering tribe of Chinese, and the idea that orientals may have reached this continent over the Behring straits is credited by many investigators. Other authorities even have professed to see a resemblance between the art of the Haida Indians and the art of the Japanese. But, of course, nothing of a definite character can be stated.

Matter of Diction.

A hard-working, motherly woman, born and bred on a farm in one part of Missouri and eventually summoned by destiny to prepare the meals for a household of miners in another section of the state, nursed a grievance that is bound to merit one's sympathy.

"Here I stand the whole day through," she complained on one occasion to a friend, "boiling and sweating over the hot stove, trying to fix up something tasty to fill up the stomachs of a lot of men folks, and then they up and calls my good grub chuck!"

New Exposure Meter.

A handy exposure meter shows the operator how to set his camera to obtain properly exposed pictures under the existing light conditions. It consists of a metallic scale with a slide and five circular windows of graduated degrees of transparency. The object to be photographed is first viewed from the most transparent window and then the slide is moved to the other windows until the one is reached through which the object is just dimly visible. The correct shutter speed and diaphragm opening will be indicated on the chart.

Arbor and Bird Day.

Arbor and Bird Day is to be observed on October 26th. Governor Pinchot, in his proclamation, urges that all share in observing this important day, either by planting some trees or assisting to preserve our trees.

"Not So Bad Being Laid Up"

Cheerful? Why not? Scheduled for a couple of weeks more, but I should worry!

Why, that little old wreck and my smashed leg have brought me a change from the "road"—all the comforts of home—and $200 every four weeks from my ÆTNA ACCIDENT POLICY, together with payment of the surgeon's fee. Not to mention the $25 I'll get every week while I'm lame-ducking in the open air.

Pretty soft, eh? Especially when a fellow works only on commission.

Seriously, all of you boys ought to

ÆTNA-IZE

You're not worrying the banks with deposits any more than I did. And when the accident breaks, your good old Ætna income keeps away the wolf and debts, and makes you independent. No sponging for me!

The cost? Honestly, too small to talk about.

Before the jinx gets 'round to you, better inquire, write or call today on my agent—

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

PADDOCK WILL DEFEND TITLE

Noted Sprinter Will Compete in Athletic Program at Legion National Convention.

With the announcement that Charles W. Paddock, "Human Flash," will compete, interest in the athletic program to be held during the American Legion national convention in San Francisco has increased among Legionnaires over the country.

Paddock is known as the highest type of American athlete. In addition to holding most of the world's sprinting records, he was a soldier in the World war, a writer, leader of boy scout activities and has displayed talent in many other lines.

Paddock left high school to serve in the field artillery during the war. He attended a training school at Camp Zachary Taylor near Louisville and received a commission of second lieutenant. He won most of the sprinting events at the Interallied Championship games in Paris and has since established a number of world's records in the dashes.

The famous sprinter told Legion convention officials that he will be on hand to defend his laurels in all distances up to the 440-yard dash. Legionnaires are confident that Paddock will celebrate his reunion with World war comrades by smashing some of his present world's records.

In addition to the track and field meet, there will be numerous other athletic events during convention week at San Francisco, including tennis, baseball, basketball, football, golf, rifle shoot, band contests, drum and bugle corps competitions, swimming and other sports.

All Legionnaires are eligible to compete in the athletic program.

PLAN TO MEET "NATIVE SONS"

"Mr. Visiting Doughboy" and "Mr. Gob" May Expect Warm Reception in San Francisco.

If you are an American Legion "buddy," and expect to attend the fifth annual convention of the organization at San Francisco, you might well begin to rehearse for your first meeting with a "Native Son."

California is filled with "Native Sons," especially San Francisco. There are two divisions or varieties—the common or garden type, and the cultivated variety. The cultivated "Native Son" is immensely proud of his nativity and parades it on every occasion by wearing the "little bear" emblem, marking membership in the "Native Sons of the Golden West." California does not pretend to comprise all the Golden West, but whenever you mention the Golden West, your true Californian jumps to his feet and gives three cheers. To him the Golden West signifies California.

The cultivated natives, meaning the native sons and native daughters, comprise about 50,000 of the state's great and growing population. Numerically they are but a drop in the bucket. But it wouldn't do for a minute to tell a native that, at least not one of the cultivated variety.

Throughout California parlors have been superseded by living rooms, except in the circles of the NSGW and NDGW. Each group or lodge is constituted a "parlor" and all are subject to the dictates of a grand parlor, presided over by a grand president. In California there are 160 "parlors." San Francisco alone has 28, with a membership of 17,000 in the two organizations in that city.

Members of the NSGW and the NDGW might be termed professional Californians. They make the accident of birth a ritual and join the order.

Perhaps it is a mistake to speak of the native son and daughter as a professional Californian. Every son and daughter of California is a professional Californian. Every one is a booster. They'd as soon think of relinquishing their citizenship as quitting California for keeps—most of them sooner. They know California is the greatest state there ever was or ever will be, that California has the finest climate, the grandest scenery, the richest soil, the huskiest athletes, the most flourishing business, the finest men and most beautiful women.

It is with these people and with that spirit that "Mr. Visiting Doughboy" and "Mr. Gob," who attend the Legion convention will collide, when they hit the convention city. Californians are proud of their heritage, proud of their sunsets and fogs, cool summers and warm winters, the hotels, cafes and Market street, and everything else that goes to make up San Francisco, which if you do not already know it is by far the greater and most important part of California. When you are in San Francisco, ask any native on for anything you wish, and if you escape without being presented the city hall, or the exposition auditorium where the Legion convention is to be held, it will be because that particular native son isn't functioning just right at the moment.

STILL AIDING WAR HEROES

Mrs. Alice P. Bristol, Through Legion Auxiliary, Continues Efforts in Behalf of Ex-Service Men.

Mrs. Alice P. Bristol, chairman of the committee for co-operation with other agencies from the American Legion Auxiliary, is continuing a record of service work begun at the first call to arms in 1917. Mrs. Bristol, along with a number of other brave workers of Stratford, Conn., "carried on" the home work while the men of that city, many of their own blood, were at the front in the fight. By dint of this service, Mrs. Bristol, through the American Legion Auxiliary is still aiding the cause of those who did their part for their country.

As a recognition of the splendid war work of the women of Stratford, the selectmen formed an organization which they termed the "Minute Women of Stratford," and at the close of the war, awarded each one of the workers a handsomely engraved certificate attesting this service. The work consisted of home relief, sale of Liberty bonds and war saving stamps, and the countless other duties which the good women of America were called on to perform for the men in uniform.

Since the armistice, Mrs. Bristol has headed local unit work, and has been instrumental in many important moves for relief of the ex-service man. It was through her suggestion, it is said, that the men of Connecticut in hospitals in other states received a cash gift for Christmas. But her work as national committeewoman of the American Legion Auxiliary is another important post which has been intrusted to her.

Mrs. Alice P. Bristol.

To Mrs. Bristol was given the chairmanship of a committee seeking close co-operation with other well-known women's organizations of the country. This committee aims to establish relationship between all bodies working for civic betterment, relief of former service men, and countless other duties with which the womanhood of America has become associated.

One of the first steps of this committee was to effect liaison between the American Legion Auxiliary and the General Federation of Women's Clubs. An application for membership in the federation, through President Kate Waller Barrett was accepted, and the auxiliary assumed an immediate participation in the councils of federated club work. The Legion's Auxiliary is also a participant in the National Council of Women, composed of nearly fifty organizations. This council includes such organizations as the American Association of University Women, International Sunshine society, Ladies of the Maccabees, National Council of Jewish Women, National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teachers' associations, National Federation of Music Clubs, National Florence Crittenton mission, National Kindergarten association, Needlework Guild of America, Women's Christian Temperance union, Y. W. C. A., and others.

During the convention of the auxiliary in San Francisco, the committee plans a "Co-operation Night" at which representatives of practically every body holding membership in the council will be asked to be present to hear further plans for service as outlined by the Legion's Auxiliary. It is expected that a definite program of co-operation will be an outgrowth of the meeting. Auxiliary officials believe that because the membership of the organization approximates that of most other women's bodies in the country, no constructive program, looking to progress along the lines indicated for their work, can be successful unless joined by their organization.

Texas Will Have Exhibit.

Not only will the traditional "old gray mare" from Texas be there, but a long-horned Texas steer will be taken by the Lone Star state Legionnaires to the national convention of the American Legion at San Francisco. Plans for special stunts on the way to and at the convention were made recently by John C. Townes, Texas department commander.

Campaign Lies.

"I hear as how the opposin' candidate fer mayor is tellin' around that you're in favor of law and order," remarked Two-Gun Gene of Holster, Ariz.

"He better be careful," retorted the present incumbent, "or I'll sue him fer criminal libel."—The American Legion Weekly.

INDIAN'S THRILLING YARN ABOUT SNAKE FIGHT

Cherokee Brave Declares Joint Reptile Attached Tail of Rattler and Fled to the Hills.

St. Paul.—William Choleta, a full-blooded Cherokee Indian living on Spavinaw creek, in the Flint Hill district of the old Cherokee nation, had a reputation for veracity that was unchallenged until he related this snake story. But now—well, here's Bill's story:

He was fishing along Spavinaw creek when his attention was attracted by a commotion behind him. Investigation disclosed a big rattler and a joint snake in deadly combat. Choleta was curious as to the outcome, but in the Spavinaw country rattlesnake oil is a specific for rheumatism, lumbago, chilblains and the like, so Choleta took matters into his own hands and killed the rattler. Then he cut off its head and tail.

The joint snake which had been fighting for its life lay scattered in several directions on the ground, according to Bill, and, true to its nature, it set about trying to connect the scattered fragments. But in its hurry, Choleta said, the joint snake picked up the tail of its enemy instead of its own. It was well that was the last fragment, for the joint snake was too frightened to assemble any more. Every movement caused the rattles to sound, and the joint snake, apparently believing it was still pursued by the enemy, set out across the hills like greased lightning.

Rat Trained on Bootleg Booze Knocks Out Two Cats

Kansas City, Mo.—Fed up on corn whisky, "Siki," a large, grizzled rat, "knocked out" two husky cats here in a two-round bout witnessed by cheering crowds.

The rat, trained for two days on cheese soaked in bootleg whisky, disposed of his opponents one at a time.

The big fellow was discovered in the basement of the city jail. When he failed to succumb to a diet of corn whisky, policemen dubbed him "Siki," and arranged a battle with the two biggest cats available.

"Tabby," an old gray cat from the city hall, was put in the pit first. "Siki" rose on his hind legs, plunged fiercely toward the feline, biting and scratching at her back. "Tabby" withdrew to her corner, and her seconds threw up the sponge.

The fight promoters then placed "Tom," champion alley heavyweight of the city, in the ring. Tom turned his back, withdrew to his corner and crouched in fear at the onslaught.

A policeman referee raised his club over the rat and declared him winner.

Conscience-Struck Woman Pays Fare 10 Years Later

Wichita, Kan.—Conscience is a relentless creditor.

This is why a woman entered the Rock Island passenger offices here several days ago and said to the passenger agent: "Mister, I am here on a peculiar mission. I came to pay for my two children's tickets which I should have bought ten years ago. I wasn't a Christian then, and I lied about the children's ages. The amount was $7.25."

Mr. Keyes, the agent, told her to forget about the incident. The woman was persistent and he wrote the general passenger agent of the road, who told him to collect $4.25. The woman refused to be satisfied until she paid the full $7.25. She then told him how she had lied numerous times before she joined the church and how she now was paying off all debts of honor.

Montreal Man to Build $3,000 Home for His Hens

Paul Smith, N. Y.—Dr. W. L. McDougald of Montreal is going to mitigate the ruggedness of life in the wilderness both for himself and for his hens, pigs and cows. A $3,000 chalet is to be erected for the hens; the pigs, it is thought, will be content with a $2,000 bungalow that is being constructed for them. A community house for the cows is being put up at an expense of $5,000. A living room for the owner is being added to Doctor McDougald's farm at an expense of $50,000.

Other campers also are adding the little conveniences of civilization to their cabins.

Two Men Die in Attempt to Save Child's Kite

Enola, Pa.—Attempting to save a child's kite, which became entangled in some wires near their home, Clarence Rider and Frank Snyder were electrocuted. Rider was using an iron rod to disentangle the kite, and Snyder was holding his arm when the rod hit the wire.

Wait 38 Years for Honeymoon.

Piqua, O.—After 38 years of married life, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F Schusselin of Piqua will take their postponed honeymoon trip. The couple was married May 12, 1885. At that time Mr. Schusselin was making $10 a week.

Big Truck Ends Rejoicing.

New York.—Two hours after setting foot on American soil, David Katz eight years old, lay in a hospital with his body crushed. David and his mother came from Poland to live with David's brothers here. A truck ran over the immigrant.

THE PLOTTER

By JANE JORDAN

(©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

MRS. CALICOT leaned back in her chair and sighed.

"It is most disappointing," she told her friend. "I must confess, when I invited Rowena to pay me a visit I had Rupert in mind. He is such a dear, worthy brother. So I planned to bring two desolate hearts together?

"'Why, Aunt Cora,' she said—I had begged her to call me aunt—'I don't believe your brother has ever had a girl in his life. He is so terribly grateful for a little kindness.' Of course I was angry at Rowena's obtuseness and lack of fine appreciation."

Mrs. Mills laughed. "Forgive me, Cora," she begged. "You must feel badly indeed when you drop into the sentimental. I'm going to advise you, by proxy, if you still desire this silly young person for a sister-in-law. I have a little friend stopping here who is well versed in the ways of love, and, alas, in its management. Prudie-Prudie-Peach, my boys wickedly call her, has captured from other of my indignant young friends their supposedly assured suitors. She is engaged herself to a man in Boston."

Prudence Wharton was called in consultation. Prudence came. Rupert's sister, seeing her, drew a breath of admiration. Prudie was like fresh sweet pinks in an old-fashioned garden; impish, yet kindly little soul. She spread her silk accordion skirt and listened to the confidence. Then she nodded her small head with its quaint, high coiffure.

"I know just how Rowena feels," she said. "We all like to think there has been competition, else how can we be sure that we may retain that which we have won? Don't you see? If we have vanquished, we may ever vanquish."

The elder ladies looked their indecision. Prudie went on:

"I recall having met Mr. Rupert Flemming at a reception. He was in attendance upon a really lovely girl—your Rowena, no doubt. She seemed, now I recollect, languidly aware of his preference. Mr. Flemming had eyes for no one else. I know, for I tried to charm him for a half hour in the library; heard of his fame as a deep writer. He followed Miss Webster about as one hypnotized. And she flirted, to torment him, because of his dog-like devotion; yes, she did." Prudie laughed back at her listeners.

Suddenly a pucker knitted her brows. "Do you suppose," she asked Rupert's sister, "that your brother is calling this afternoon on Miss Rowena?"

"He will be at our home for dinner this evening," Rowena's hostess replied.

"All right and good," the reader of human hearts answered. "You will excuse me now, please." She flashed a placating smile and vanished.

"Leave the problem to Prudie," Mrs. Mills advised.

Dinner was about to be served in the Calicot home that evening when Mr. Rupert Flemming was called to the telephone. Miss Rowena handed the receiver over to her lover. She had first been asked for, and a pleasing feminine voice had explained to her announcing Miss Webster speaking. "Thank you, I wanted to locate Mr. Flemming through you."

Therefore, it may have been absently or it may have been purposely that Rowena waited in the neighborhood of the telephone. Rupert took up the receiver briskly and the vibrant girlish voice that called him reached Rowena as distinctly as though she also were receiving the message:

"This is Miss Wharton—Prudie Wharton. You remember meeting me at the Merton reception, Mr. Flemming? You could give me so little time because Miss Webster happened to be with you. And I wanted so to know about your wonderful book—and we have a mutual acquaintance in Boston who will insist on hearing all about you at first hand. So won't you promise me a call very soon? I am a guest at Mrs. Mills this time. Auntie Sue is in New York. I usually visit there. Can you come here tomorrow afternoon for tea? Mrs. Mills will send her car. She does not like her guests to be disappointed when they have set their hearts upon a thing. You will come, Mr. Flemming?"

Rupert stood, frantically trying to recall Miss Wharton, who remembered him so well—who was so astonishingly anxious to see him. Trying to think "who in thunder" the mutual friend in Boston might be, he answered lamely: "Just a moment please, Miss Webster is here." That sounded strange, and he hastily added: "I have several engagements with Miss Webster; she will know if I am free tomorrow afternoon." He turned confusedly to the woman he loved. His glance was coldly received.

"Go, if you want to," said Rowena, in an unnatural tone.

Rupert was hopelessly troubled. Women were queer. Here was Rowena, all coldness in a moment; here was Rowena, her usually calm eyes leep with reproach.

"Do you want me to go?" he stammered.

"If you'd rather be with that girl than me, Rupert," she said.

His arms went around her. Surrendering, Rowena's head dropped on his breast.

Prudie, at the other end of the wire, turned from the silent messenger. "It's all right," she told Mrs. Mills.

Little Sam Miller, aged three, son of Sidney Miller of Rainbow fame, has an eye to the future and will no doubt follow in the steps of his father should war come.

When his father was arraying himself in the panoply of war in preparation for the Rainbow parade, little Sam was a most interested spectator. He noted the well-pressed khaki suit, and the Sam Browne belt neatly adjusted, the overseas cap well on one side of the head, and sighed. Running over to his mother he said:

"Honey, I wish I could grow big feet and be a Rainbow."

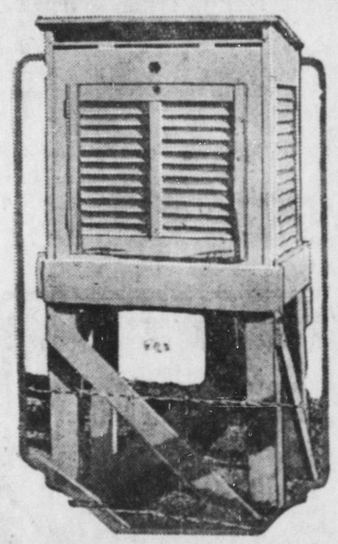
HOTTEST SPOT ON EARTH



The highest natural air temperature known on earth was recorded by this meteorological instrument kept by the United States government on the floor of the famous Death valley in southern California—the hottest spot on earth. The almost unbelievable temperature of 134 degrees Fahrenheit was registered by the mercury there this year. Only one white man lives there. He replaced five others who died insane.

PROF. AND MRS. SHAW SAFE

Home, With Contents, Destroyed in Disastrous Fire.

Centre County friends of Prof. and Mrs. Charles F. Shaw, will be pleased to learn from late reports that while their home and all contents were lost in the recent disastrous fire at Berkeley, Cal., the Shaws were not lost or harmed as indicated by previous reports.

Prof. Shaw was teaching in the University of California when the fire was discovered. He got out of the college allright and was helping to remove from his home, which was being burned, a buffet containing some valuable silverware and other articles cherished as keepsakes. The piece of furniture caught fire while they were moving it, however, and could not be saved, so that they lost all. The loss of their home and goods was estimated at $15,000 and Mr. Shaw had $9,000 insurance.

Prof. Shaw was formerly head of the soils department at the Pennsylvania State College, and was one of three from the United State Beureau of Soils to make a map of Centre County. Mrs. Shaw was formerly Miss Helen Hostermen, of Centre Hall.

D. A. R. INFORMATION

For Local Members Who Plan to go to Lancaster.

The information given below is essential for all Daughters of the American Revolution desiring to attend the State Conference to be held at Lancaster, October 22 to 25 inclusive.

The railroads have granted a reduction of one-half the regular fare on return trip under the following conditions:

Two hundred and fifty members must hold certificates of identification.

Certificates must be secured at the time of purchase of tickets to Lancaster.

Certificates must be endorsed at Headquarters in Lancaster by the Chairman of Transportation and validated by the Special Agent of the railroads, who will be in attendance on Thursday, October 25.

No reduction will be made in fares of less than 67 cents.

No refund will be made on account of failure to obtain proper certificate of identification when purchasing going ticket, nor on account of failure to present validated certificate when purchasing return ticket.

If ticket agents are not supplied with the usual certificate, request a receipt when purchasing going ticket.

Note carefully: Tickets to Lancaster may be purchased October 18 to 24 inclusive. Tickets will be validated by special agent October 25. Return tickets will be honored until midnight 29.

Present yourself at the railroad station for tickets and certificates at least thirty minutes before departure of the train on which you will begin your journey to Lancaster.

Certificates of identification are available for all members of the Daughters of the American Revolution and dependent members of their families.

Planning to Move.

Clarence Kunes, of Blanchard, is planning to move to Lock Haven, where he is employed in a furniture factory.

CORN SUCCEEDS CORN

Blair County Man Has Remarkable 38th Crop.

Centre County farmers generally follow crop rotation for best refults and are familiar with the c-o-w plan, which is to have corn follow sod, oats after corn and then wheat, used in getting a good grass stand. It is of interest to note any deviation from this plant that is successful.

Over in Blair County, in Blair Twp., is a farmer well along in years—Charles A. Baker—who has been growing corn on the same land for years with marked success and who has apparently no time for the crop rotation plan. In commenting on his 38th crop, an Altoona paper gives the following statement:

"The corn is so tall that a full sized man, standing on tiptoe cannot reach most of the ears. In addition to the corn, the ground is fairly covered with cow pumpkins, most of them nearly as large as a bushel basket. The land is of the sandy loam type, located on the banks of the Juniata river. It is kept in a high state of cultivation by the annual application of barnyard manure and lime at intervals.

"The bumper crop that is being harvested on the land now is so luxuriant that an expected yield of 150 bushels to the acre is anticipated. The record of this particular piece of land as corn ground perhaps stands without parallel in the state."

In Lock Haven Hospital.

Charles Packer, aged 2 years, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ward Pahker, of Blanchard, was admitted on Monday to the Lock Haven Hospital for surgical treatment.

Suffering from Anaemia.
